the king saw _____ with the friends! God had sent the _____ to (noun) (same as previous noun)

protect the friends. In fact, they weren't even _____! The friends (adjective)

weren't afraid because they knew God would help them.

After reading the Mad Lib, make sure kids know how the real story goes by recapping:
The king made a law saying that everyone had to bow and pray to a statue he made. Three friends knew that they should only pray to God. When the king threatened to throw the friends into a fiery furnace, the men weren't afraid because they knew God would help them. God protected them, and they weren't even burned after going into the furnace! When we are afraid, we can remember the truth that God will help us just like He helped these friends!
